Programme Description and Structure

The MPhil in Interdisciplinary Arts Studies offers you the opportunity to develop an innovative research or integrated artistic project that cuts across traditional boundaries of academic disciplines, performance practices and artistic media. The programme is aimed both at practicing artists and performers, and at students following a more conventional academic trajectory in the study of music, visual arts, theatre and performance studies, or in historical, philosophical, sociological or ethnographic reflections on arts practices.

Participation in the Africa Open Institute's weekly research seminar is compulsory

Duration of Programme

The programme extends over one academic year.

Postgraduate Programmes

For more information on the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences' postgraduate programmes, consult the University's Postgraduate Prospectus or the various departmental websites.

1. Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL)

Special admission to the postgraduate programmes in the Faculty is available to you if you:

- were denied opportunities to formal learning environments earlier because of systemic or other limitations, but you can demonstrate that you can now participate at a particular level in such learning opportunities; or
- can receive retrospective recognition for them.

If you do not have a bachelor's degree, you must follow the Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL) procedure for admission to a postgraduate diploma, honours, MPhil or MA programme. Not all departments have the possibility of admission by means of the RPL procedure. A bachelor's degree awarded by a university of technology or a private provider of higher education will be recognised only if your degree is registered with the South African Qualifications Authority (SAQA) on the same level as the required university qualification.

Please note: It remains the responsibility of a Department to establish if your existing qualification is up to standard.

More details of the Faculty's RPL procedure are available from the Faculty Administrator, Arts and Social Sciences, in the Admin A building.
